Green Industry professionals can learn new skills, earn CEUs, and gain business ideas with Ewing's new classes for 2012-2013.

New curriculum focuses on the latest trends, technologies and best management practices to help landscape and irrigation professionals become more competitive and profitable.

With more than 200 classes being offered across the country, Ewing's courses offer busy contractors a convenient way to build skills and receive CEUs. Workshops are divided into five main tracks: irrigation and water management, turf, lighting, business and hardscape.

Courses will be offered from October through April 2013 at various locations throughout the U.S. Custom training is also available for organizations, water agencies and other interested professionals through Ewing's Enterprise Training program.
