BLOOMINGTON, Minn. – The Toro Company has acquired the light construction and hardscape product assets of Stone Construction Equipment, Inc., which manufactured concrete and hardscape equipment for rental and construction companies. Terms of the transaction were not disclosed.

This acquisition builds on Toro's position in the growing rental market with a reputable line of branded products in the hardscape space, which include concrete and mortar mixers, material handlers, compaction equipment and other concrete power tools. These products further extend Toro's offering to contractors and rental companies, and complement its recent acquisitions of tree care and turf renovation product lines.

"Stone built a solid reputation around quality," said Rick Rodier, general manager of Toro's Sitework Systems Business. "These products are respected by rental and construction customers, and complement our current line of compact utility equipment and trenchers extremely well. We see great opportunity to leverage our core strengths in innovation, engineering and distribution to grow share in these new categories."
